by Dick Townsend-Smith

THESE children from Cherry Orchard school left no-one in any doubt about the size of a cash windfall that will help rejuvenate Charlton Lido.

The £150,000 of funding has come from Sport England, and will be used by the royal borough to update changing rooms at the lido. The centre is being redeveloped as part of Greenwich's Olympic legacy to provide an outdoor 50 metre heated pool and separate teaching pool.

Their swim of a lifetime

LAST Sunday (March 19), swimmers from across the borough had the chance-of-a-lifetime to swim at the Aquatics Centre in the Olympic Park.
Around 45 of them had a fantastic time swimming at the pool where the likes of Rebecca Adlington had just qualified for the Olympics. What a way for the mums to spend Mother's Day watching their children.

To all the parents, coaches, officials, volunteers and most of all the swimmers, a big thank you for an incredible day. And a big thank you from everyone involved to Suzanne Philpot, Greenwich aquatics manager for making it happen. The host boroughs gala - for the six boroughs which are hosting an Olympic event - was her brainchild a few years ago. The first one was held in Eltham - last year's was in Hackney. And around 15 months ago she had the idea of trying to do this year's one at the Aquatics Centre. It's taken a lot of hard work and teamwork to get there - but she managed it.

Dickie Davis, chairman, Greenwich Swimming Club

Why transfer library service to Greenwich Leisure Limited?

WE are dismayed to learn that Greenwich Council has decided to transfer its library service to Greenwich Leisure Limited, a private company. Why do the councillors think that a private company with no experience of running libraries could operate the service better than the council with its long history of doing so satisfactorily? The council is relinquishing its responsibility to the vagaries of a democratically unaccountable private organisation. It has not got a mandate to do so from the voters of Greenwich. The public seem to have been kept very much in the dark about its move to privatise the service and there appears to have been very little meaningful public consultation preceding this retrograde step.

We fear that under an unaccountable private management the service would deteriorate both in quality and quantity and its future would be less secure. A good library service is vital to the quality of life of a civilised community; it should be administered by a democratically elected private body answerable to the community. The Greenwich councillors should therefore reconsider their decision about the service, stop privatisation and make sure that it continues to be directly run by the council.

Mary and Sudhir Biswas, Eltham

● THE ROYAL Borough has decided to work in partnership with Greenwich Leisure Limited (GLL) in order to secure the future of our libraries. GLL is NOT a private company but a cooperative enterprise in which the Royal Borough of Greenwich, employees, service users and trade unions are all represented on the board. We have managed to enhance the service provision for leisure during this time and we have already done so with our library provision. Many other councils have cut their library service, whilst here in Royal Greenwich the new centre in Woolwich has seen the size of the library expand four fold.

A similar new service centre in Greenwich, which is currently being built, will also see library provision expanded. We remain confident that this arrangement will protect the library service unless the borough's budgets are cut further by central government.

Pupils should be taught humanism too

I WRITE as secretary of SE London Humanists. I note (GT, March 20) that Greenwich has launched a new syllabus for Religious Education (RE) in schools. I hope humanism is included, as it is in some London boroughs? More than a third of school pupils, in surveys, are not personally aligned to a faith group. It is important they know that morality without religion is an acceptable ethical approach. Humanism stands for human rights and humans behaving towards others as they might wish others behave towards them. Denis Cobell, Catford

● THE principles of humanism run as a strong thread throughout the new curriculum, with direct references for instance to humanist approaches to marriage and death. The Standing Advisory Council on Religious Education (SACRE) has recently been in contact with a humanist representative with a view to involving a representative of humanism in SACRE's work.

Catering students cook with top chefs

CATERING students got their first masterclass with Michelin-starred chefs as they prepare to cook for guests on a prestigious River Thames regatta this summer.

Top chefs Ron Blaauw and Richard Corrigan visited the kitchens at the Shooters Hill Post 16 Campus where catering students learn their trade in the City View restaurant.

Thirteen students are getting the once-in-a-lifetime chance to cook for the Sail Royal Greenwich 2012 event during the London Olympics.

Sixteen historic tall ships will be moored at the Royal Arsenal Pier between July 25 and August 12. They'll be sailing twice daily to Tower Bridge giving groups of corporate customers a unique hospitality experience. The fleet expects to cater for over 1,200 corporate clients.

The students will gain valuable experience for their careers as yet another legacy of the London 2012 Games. In the meantime, they'll be working alongside the Michelin-starred chefs who have designed menus to be served on board. The chefs spent more than four hours with the students last Thursday, giving them a masterclass on cooking top-quality dishes.

Tom Dickinson, 17, said: "It's really good experience to learn in a professional environment from Michelin-starred chefs. Ron talked about cooking from the heart, and I'm really looking forward to cooking for the event."

Holly-Anne Shaheen, 18, said: "It was good to hear from the chefs how passion for cooking is more important than having qualifications." And Ben Day, 18, said: "It's really good that we are going to be working with these chefs - opportunities like this hardly ever come around."

Sail Royal Greenwich is also giving 28 travel and tourism students the chance to be guides on the flotilla. Shooters Hill Post 16 Campus headteacher Mark

Vincent said: "Thanks to Sail Royal Greenwich, we are now able to offer our students not only the highest level of work experience, which will be brilliant for their CVs, but also the potential to make vital employer links leading to work opportunities in a difficult job market."

OLYMPIC LEGACY

Helping you switch to digital TV

THE Royal Borough of Greenwich is investing £1.5m to ensure tenants have digital reception for their TVs in the big switchover from analogue.

Royal Greenwich goes digital on April 4 and 18 as part of the switchover for the capital.

This won't mean a massive change to how you watch your TV but it will mean that if you don't re-tune your TV, Digital box or provider box, you won't be able to watch your favourite programmes!

More than 12 million viewers will be switching to digital but this doesn't mean that you will have to buy a new TV. It may however mean that you will have to buy a freeview digital box and the scart lead to connect it to your existing TV. Having a freeview box and digital TV means that you will have access to at least 60 channels and around 15 radio stations to view and listen to from your television.

Royal Greenwich is providing digital reception for around 6,000 residents in blocks of flats and maisonettes giving them the option of using freeview, Freesat or subscription channels.

Where connections have not been made, tenants can arrange for specialist contractors to visit by calling the contact centre on 020 8921 8900.

Digital UK is a not-for-profit company leading the switchover and other than buying a digital box, the actual switchover is free. The royal borough is also warning residents to be aware of any organisation offering a switchover at a cost.

If you have concerns or have been contacted by an organisation other than Digital UK, contact trading standards at the Royal Borough of Greenwich on 020 8921 8223. If you are on benefits or a low income Digital UK also offers a free help scheme.

Find out what help is available from the Switchover Help Scheme on 0800 40 85 900 or www.helpscheme.co.uk

● To find out more about the digital switchover visit www.digitaluk.co.uk or ring 08456 505050.

Pupil helps plan post-Games future of Olympic Park

A TEENAGER from the Royal Borough of Greenwich is one of 30 young people chosen to shape the future of the Olympic Park.

Destinie Okoibhole is one of the newly-appointed members of the 2012 Legacy Youth Panel which is helping to determine the future of the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

The new recruits are from the six Olympic Host Boroughs of Newham, Hackney, Tower Hamlets, Waltham Forest, Barking and Dagenham and the Royal Borough of Greenwich.

They will join 60 existing Legacy Youth Panel members who are working with the Olympic Park Legacy Company which is overseeing the long term future of the Olympic Park.

The youth panel was formed in 2008 giving young people a chance to contribute to the planning and development of the park and to learn valuable skills along the way.

Destinie and the other new recruits joined the panel after an event in December where they were able to meet existing panel members and learn more about the plans for the Park after the Games have ended.

Over the coming months the 90 young people will scrutinise post-Games plans and designs for the park to ensure they meet the needs of young people and their communities.

In addition, the youth panellists will act as ambassadors for the park visiting local schools and youth groups to make sure young people in the host boroughs know what is happening on the site after the Games.

Fourteen-year-old Destinie - who goes to St Ursula's Convent School, Greenwich, said: "It is a great chance for the youth to get involved in things that will affect us now in the future as we are the next generation and the decisions of today can change lives forever."

The basketball player added: "I'm really excited about Greenwich hosting some of the events and having the Olympics where I live. I'm looking forward to the basketball and the gymnastics."

Andrew Altman, chief executive of the Olympic Park Legacy Company, said: "Young people are at the heart of the Olympic Park Legacy Company's plans. The Legacy Youth Panel means they can get involved in designing and delivering some fantastic new facilities for this part of London. With the Games just a few months away it's a really exciting time to join the panel."

Charlton's pools winners

The children were there to see the cheque handed over on Friday afternoon to Cllr John Fahy, cabinet member for culture and the Olympics. He told them: "The lido will be open all the year round, and you must come to swim here. This is a very exciting day and the pool opening is something this community is looking forward to."

in particular are keen for work on the pool to finish soon so it can open. Ayis Stephen-Diuer, nine, said: "I'm learning to swim and I want to come here with my older sister and swim in the open air."

Michaela Owusu, 10, who learned to swim two years ago, said: "I'm looking forward to being able to swim outdoors, but I'd really like to have my own pool." And Henry Hoang, nine, said:

"I can do a bit of backstroke and we go to the Waterfront in Woolwich, but I'll be coming here with my sister Yuanqi when it opens."

The children from Year 5 also showed their agility and sports skills to the guests at the cheque presentation - on Friday, who included Sport England's Director of Sport Lisa O'Keefe, Clive Efford MP, and members of Greenwich Leisure Ltd.

The £150,000 from Sport England's Inspired Facilities Fund is part of the £135 million Places People Play legacy programme that is bringing the magic of the Olympic and Paralympic Games into communities across the country.

A blast

TALENTED pupils have been impressing visitors with their project work on Royal Greenwich.

The latest school to present its royal schools history project was Mulgrave in Rectory Place, Woolwich. Five-hundred early years and primary children took the London 2012 Games as the topic of their project and each class was given a canvas to decorate featuring an Olympic sport.

They were shown to former Mayor of Greenwich Brian O'Sullivan who spoke to the children about the Queen's Diamond Jubilee and Greenwich becoming a royal borough when he visited last week.

Seven and eight-year-olds from Year 3 have also been writing about how they enjoy learning about their royal past. Abdullahi Ali said: "I feel really happy that Greenwich has become a royal borough because a lot of kings and queens have been born here."

Mussy Akin wrote: "I feel extremely joyful that Greenwich is going to be represented by royal kings and queens."

And friends Alicia Kironde and Kenedi Tomsett Henry added: "We are very excited that Greenwich has become a royal borough because we represent the people who live and work here," said Alicia.

Pupils at Nightingale Primary school were among the first to complete a royal schools history project. Youngsters at the school in Bloomfield Road, Woolwich, made a double-decker bus from cardboard and papier mache and called it the Blingaling Bus 53. They were led by three Year 5 pupils who explained the thinking behind it. Marco, 10, said: "In the beginning, we wanted to make something to go on the fourth plinth in Trafalgar Square. The 53 bus is the link between Plumstead where we live and Trafalgar Square. It also goes very close to Buckingham Palace and it has been running on the same route since 1952 - the year of the Queen's coronation."

Mahdhi, nine, added: "We found out that there were some gold-coloured buses made for the Golden Jubilee in 2002. We decided to cover our bus in 'diamonds' and call it our Blingaling Bus to give Plumstead some more sparkle, remember the Pearly Kings and Queens of London, and celebrate the Queen's Diamond Jubilee with a bit of bling."

And nine-year-old Yusra explained: "The bus has pictures of all our class in the windows, and some of our teachers are in it too. The Queen is driving it though. She is in charge."

Reading on royal themes

FEBRUARY and March have been exciting months in the Borough of Greenwich and even more so at Alderwood Primary School. Firstly, Greenwich borough was granted royal status on February 3. There are only a few royal boroughs in London, so this is a very special event for Greenwich. The prestigious occasion was celebrated at Alderwood with a highly successful book week. During this week, each class chose a book to study with a royal theme. This culminated in class displays, which contributed to a whole school exhibition. The week was amazing! On March 13 important visitors attended Alderwood, including school governors and a former Mayoress. They were escorted to our exhibition by two children from Year Six. The 'Mayoress' said that she had learned something during her visit - that the Queen (from the book 'The Queen's Knickers' by Nicholas Allan) had a different pair of knickers for each occasion. Following the tour a special assembly took place and each child received a special coin to commemorate Greenwich's Royal status but also to recognise the 2012 Olympics and Paralympics, which are being held in Britain this summer. Report by Alderwood Primary School pupils

HATS OFF: Meridian pupils Miles Devonish-Emanuel, George O'Brien, Sydney Lai and Myrtille Lehmann talk to deputy mayor Cllr David Grant and Col Cyril Young, the Queen's representative for Greenwich

The life and times of Nelson Nobbs

YEAR 5 at Meridian Primary School chose a project which commemorates a former pupil and his royal connections...

In school, we have a memorial which lists the pupils who fought and died during WW1. One of those names is Nelson Nobbs. After researching historical records, we found out all we could about his life. It was amazing to think that over hundred years ago, Nelson might have been sitting in our very classroom. At the outbreak of war, he was married with a family but he decided to join the Royal Fusiliers and was finally posted to France in 1916. To find out what it was like as a WW1 soldier, we visited the Royal Fusilier Museum and discovered that life was not as perfect as they first thought. Living in the trenches was a deadly nightmare - it was rat-infested, unhygienic and unbelievably dangerous. We drew charcoal pictures to show how bleak and depressing war was;

we wrote letters to our loved ones in character, describing life before and during action on the Somme; we designed our own medals to represent the values which we felt were important and also became WW1 reporters to produce newspaper articles. As a class, we admired the patriotism, pride and the fact that the men never gave up fighting. If they hadn't, Greenwich or even Britain might be a very different place today. Sadly, millions of people died during WW1, including our local hero - Private Nobbs was killed in action in 1918.

2012 is a special year. We feel proud to part of a royal borough - it's an incredible honour because there are very few and it celebrates Greenwich's royal connections. It's also an Olympic year which promotes the values of friendship, determination and respect; these are all qualities that Nelson Nobbs and his comrades showed and they continue to inspire us.

Recycling saves money

Last year Royal Borough of Greenwich residents played their part in helping London save £30m by recycling. The more we recycle the less we have to pay for waste disposal.

Keep it simple – every little helps! If you are new to recycling why not start with paper and glass bottles, you will always have the option to include other items later if you wish.

If you are not already recycling then telephone the Royal Borough's Contact Centre on 020 8921 4661 to order your blue top bin or recycling sacks.

As more residents are joining the recycling scheme we are seeing a steady increase in good quality recycling material so keep up the good work.

Please remember that if you are going to join our recycling scheme we can only accept clean material and only the five material types listed. Blue top bins that contain the wrong material cannot be emptied by the blue top collection team.

REMINDER – Wheelie bins can be left at the front of your property on collection day, or the night before but should not be left on the pavement at any other time. If you do not have room to store bins off the public highway we will provide you with bags to store your waste.

Uni staff win the Everest Challenge

A TEAM of staff from the University of Greenwich has won a walking competition called the Everest Challenge.

The competition, which began in January, involved 37 teams from across Royal Greenwich, all trying to walk the distance equivalent to climbing Mount Everest.

In total, 269 participants together took 134,926,836 steps. The winning team of six colleagues, who named themselves TOWIE (The Only Way Is Everest), managed to reach the summit at the end of February.

By wearing Fitbug pedometers - small electronic devices which measure the number of steps taken by the wearer - participants were able to record how far they had walked, run or jogged.

This information was then uploaded onto the Everest Challenge website so that it could be seen which team had taken the most steps.

The competition was organised by NHS Greenwich as part of its Workplace Health Programme, which encourages employers to support the health and well-being of their staff. The Everest Challenge saw teams entering from some of the largest workforces in the local area, including the South London Hospital Trust and the Royal Borough of Greenwich.

Winning team member Glen Tugwell said: "I have asthma and I can see the improvement. I don't use the inhaler as much as before. I have noticed that my lungs have opened up and I can now withstand physical activity."

Royal Greenwich's deputy leader, Peter Brooks said: "I am pleased that the Everest Challenge has encouraged staff to walk more.

"Walking is better for our environment and it is also better for our health and general well-being. Each step takes us towards a healthier and more sustainable future."

● FUTURE walking competitions are being planned, including a 'Beijing to London walking challenge'. Any organisation or business interested in getting involved should go to www.greenwichhealthyliving.nhs.uk for more information.

Plum job for green fingered residents

Fruit trees planted in Woolwich and Plumstead

GREEN fingered residents of Royal Greenwich are hard at work planting fruit trees on estates across Woolwich and Plumstead.

Inspired by local history and keen to support biodiversity in their neighbourhood, volunteers have been creating orchards on Woolwich Common and on the Nightingale Estate.

Residents are being supported by Avant Gardening, an organisation which encourages communities to engage creatively with the environment around them.

A series of workshops were held to provide volunteers with the skills needed to plant and look after the trees.

The planting started at the end of February as part of the London Orchard Project, which hopes to increase the number of fruit trees across the city and to encourage Londoners to rediscover the pleasure of eating home-grown fruit.

Avant Gardening's Paul Green told GT: "It was great to see so many children enthusiastic to learn about looking after the trees. We are now setting up a voluntary group for young people who want to help. We enjoy a very good relationship with local residents."

Leader of the Royal Borough of Greenwich Chris Roberts said: "It is fantastic that residents got involved with these tree planting projects."

"I know that many people are fascinated to learn about the horticultural history of Royal Greenwich. For example, Plumstead used to be covered in orchards - the name means 'the place where the plums grow'. I welcome these efforts to bring more trees to our estates and I look forward to the apples and plums being ready to eat!"

Several green initiatives have been undertaken on the Nightingale Estate in recent years.

An innovative "mobile allotment" scheme and raised garden beds made out of recycled materials have won prizes and much acclaim.

There are now exciting plans to create an urban gardening trail from Woolwich Common to Plumstead Common.

Working in partnership with the charity Welcare and schools in Royal Greenwich, Avant Gardening hopes to launch the trail with a variety of community-led activities and workshops later this spring.

New lease of wildlife for Abbey wood

THE Flowers Estate in Abbey Wood will be given a new lease of life after a disused area behind it is transformed into a community food growing space. The area is open to anyone who lives on the estate to grow fruit and veg or plants and flowers. The area will include bird feeders and wildlife-friendly areas along with bee and butterfly-friendly borders of wild flowers. So it will also help the development of natural wildlife in the area. The scheme was recently awarded a grant of £5,000 from the Transform Fund, which helps community groups in the five Olympic host boroughs regenerate run-down and underused green spaces. The fund is part of the London 2012 Changing Places Programme and is funded by the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and The City Bridge Trust.

Support for jubilee street party hosts

IT'S just two months to go to the Queen's Jubilee and 25 street parties have been organised by neighbours. They've been getting a helping hand from the Royal Borough of Greenwich, which is providing all the advice and information they need about hosting a celebration event from a special weblink set up by the royal borough. The site features information on where to host a street party or community event, registering your event, road closures, entertainment and licensing. Most people are holding events during the Jubilee celebration weekend of June 2-5. The weekend also covers The Big Lunch, an annual get-together for neighbours which takes place on June 3 and many residents are organising lunch dates for that too. They can apply for free Big Lunch packs online at www.thebiglunch.com. Consultant Helen Foster is planning a party in a Blackheath cul-de-sac for the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. She told GT: "We've had meetings involving local residents who have been drumming up support and ideas. We want it to have something for everyone. There have been some newcomers to the area and this party will give everyone the chance to meet each other and integrate." ● For help with organising a street party visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/streetparties or email jubileelympicevents@greenwich.gov.uk

Blue van man is caught in the act

He leaves court minus his vehicle after guilty plea

A FLY tipper caught and photographed in the act had his tipper lorry valued at £4,800 confiscated after he pleaded guilty to four charges in court.

The operation was carried out by the Royal Borough of Greenwich and the Police's Abbey Wood Safer Neighbourhoods Team, Bexley Magistrates' Court heard on Friday, March 9.

John King, 45, from Abbey Wood, used the blue transit tipper lorry for illegal waste collections and illegally dumping it.

In August, 2011, the Enviro-Crime Enforcement Team from the Royal Borough learned the lorry was being used to unlawfully collect and transport waste from residents.

The vehicle was identified as being owned and driven by Mr King, and over a three-week period officers kept a log of sightings of the vehicle and photographed the waste contained on it.

On four occasions the waste, mostly general household waste and builders' material, was found dumped on the highway. There were three flytips in Abbey Wood and one in the borough of Bexley. He was subsequently charged with four offences of fly-tipping and pleaded guilty in

THE OFFENDING VEHICLE: Mr King's tipper lorry that was seized after he pleaded guilty to fly-tipping in the Royal Borough court.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the royal borough's cabinet member for environment and community safety, said: "I congratulate our officers for their dedication and hard work in successfully gathering the necessary evidence to help deliver this prosecution.

"We will not tolerate the selfish actions of individuals like Mr King. These criminals are only interested in profiteering from illegally collected waste, even if that means dumping piles of rubbish across the royal borough and leaving it for others to pay to clean up.

"I understand that vehicle seizures are rare in these cases so am grateful to the court for approving our request for Mr King's van to be taken from him. This should also act as a reminder to local residents and businesses that they should only give waste to registered waste carriers or dispose of any unwanted waste responsibly."

TOURISTS and Olympics spectators will get an insight into the artistic talents of young residents thanks to a unique exhibition on the Woolwich Ferry. Artworks inspired by the Games are on show until September. GRACE LIPSKI went to find out more...

The

HIGH RISE: Wai-Cuong Chu used card, enamel spray paint and stencils to create his picture featuring iconic buildings from across the royal borough

YOUNG people inspired by the London 2012 Games have created great artworks due to be showcased in a floating gallery during the Games this summer.

The works have been created by young artists from Shooters Hill Campus and Greenwich Youth Offending Service and are due to be displayed on the Woolwich Ferry until the end of the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The designs will be seen by hundreds of ferry passengers, tourists and spectators offering them an artistic perspective of the royal borough and the achievements of the budding artists from diverse backgrounds. It's all part of Changing Places, a project co-ordinated by the London 2012 organisers, and the Met Police with support from the Royal Borough of Greenwich.

One of the aims of the project is to reduce crime and the fear of crime by creating a more pleasant living and working environment. Starting after Easter, the six-month exhibition on board the ferry is the latest project designed to inspire young people as part of the legacy of the Olympic Games.

This is in addition to several new apprenticeship schemes for young people. Some will be at a new equestrian centre which is due to be built on Blackheath. Other apprenticeship opportunities are available in tourism, hospitality, catering and construction.

The canvases by 30 young people which also reflect the diversity of the Olympic athletes was showcased in a two-day display at Woolwich Town Hall last month.

Art and design student Greta Maricaite, 19 hoped her weightlifting piece would pack

a punch. She said: "Mine has paint and mixed media. I used old newspapers, which is how we get our information about the Olympics. I wanted a unique and strong theme that represents the fire that burns within athletes who want to be winners."

Tenica Perry, 18, said: "I was inspired by ancient art and Chinese mythology and Ed Hardy's style of work. I'd love to do it again if I could and be a mentor for other young artists."

Om Thapa, 17, used the Olympic rings with colourful jost. She said: "It took me around four weeks to complete. I used the five Olympic colours to create a geometric work with rings in different configurations. I enjoyed using digital imagery to produce this."

Sophie Farmer, an arts teacher at Shooter's Hill post-16 campus who helped the students take part in the project, told GT: "We wanted the students to experience having to undertake a real commission with a real deadline. They researched Woolwich and I'm really pleased with the work they've produced."

Cllr Jackie Smith, the royal borough's cabinet member for children and young people, said: "This project has provided an excellent opportunity for young people to be inspired by, and involved in, the London Games."

"They've created bold, innovative work to offer a fitting welcome to people visiting the royal borough during the Games."

HUNGRY SNAPPERS: Elsa is centre of attention in There's a Leak

A hole lot of theatre

CORELLI College and Greenwich Theatre have teamed up for a dramatic double bill on Monday April 16.

There's a Leak by Ben Hales is a dark comedy about a young girl and her cat who discover a hole in the pavement which is sucking in more air than a top-of-the-range Dyson. Unwitting passers-by make the hole situation even worse, leaving Elsa and her moggy with a problem that really sucks...

The second on the bill is Medea, originally penned by Greek tragedian Euripides, but adapted here by Hales. It's a classic caper of lust and vengeance - with a barbarian at its heart.

The collaboration between the college and the theatre is the latest in a run which has seen the pairing take the plaudits for productions of Romeo and Juliet, and Lysistrata.

Mon April 16, 7.30pm, matinee at 1.30pm.
Tickets £12.50-£7 (group tickets available).

Olympic act

THERE'S still time to get involved in the Olympics as a street performer. Open auditions take place in General Gordon Square in Woolwich next week (April 10 and 11) from 10am until 4pm. Five-minute skits from local acts, open for public viewing. The best will be chosen to do their thing at the three Greenwich 2012 venues.

The Greenwich and Docklands International Festival has been going strong for more than 15 years. With the line-up for this year just announced, ROD KITSON speaks to artistic director and founder, Bradley Hemmings...

THE festival played to more than 80,000 people last year - but the pressure's really on for Bradley Hemmings this summer, when he'll have a global audience of MILLIONS.

As well as the Greenwich and Docklands International Festival, the artistic director's been signed up for the opening ceremony of the 2012 Paralympic Games.

Bradley told Scene: "It's a gargantuan task - I can't help feeling somewhat apprehensive, because the viewing figures around the world will be something like half a billion! I can't say there's no pressure - but I'm really enjoying the challenge."

Before the Games begin, Bradley is at the helm of the GDFI, the festival he started in the mid-1990s.

"The festival has been going since 1996," he said. "At that time there was a sense that London was moving east - we could see the way Greenwich and east London were moving so we thought it would be really interesting to make a festival that crossed the river."

It's part of The Greenwich Festivals, the royal borough's annual roster of cultural events, and runs from June 21-30.

"I think with this being a really defining year for the borough, we wanted to really strive to make it something particularly special," he said.

HUGE SPECTACLE: Prometheus Awaits (main pic and left) comes to the festival directed by Bradley, below. Far left, giraffes were a highlight at last year's GDIF

A BIG THUMBS UP: Lucy Ward does her thing on the stage

The sky's the limit for Lucy

CONTARY to what Simon Cowell might think, star quality is not a commodity to be packaged and sold.

It's not an index of spangly teeth, bland good looks and vacuous personalities.

It's more ethereal than that. It's the creaking of seats as an audience leans forward, the inaudible buzz when a star takes the stage, an invisible light that emanates from its subject.

It can't be polished to a fine glaze at finishing school. In short, you've either got it, or you don't.

Lucy Ward's got it. She headlined The Set at Greenwich Theatre last week, and possesses a natural affinity with her crowd, a forceless banter and a certain joie de vivre that more jaded performers lack.

The road to Albion is littered with the corpses of the desperate, the damned and the talentless. And though she's too polite to step over the bodies on her continued and inevitable rise to the top, the 21-year-old folk singer from Derby is none of the above. Where a lesser and more egotistical bill-topper might have sulked and skulked in the dressing room until her star turn, Ward sat attentive in the cheap seats with the rest of the great unwashed to cheer her contemporaries.

Sea shanty sailor Jim Radford was the opening bookend of worldly wordiness which Ward would complement with her own sans-guitar deliveries at the top of the show. Dean and I were more lightweight and not so befitting of a folk night. Dean's got a great voice – particularly in his high register – but his blue-eyed pop was slightly banal next to the articulate Ward.

Carl Picton and his Cartel are a big draw round these parts, and large swathes of the 100-strong crowd seemed to know all his songs. He's at his best when doing barnstorming numbers like Knock Knock augmented by his boisterous backing band.

Lucy herself did a mix of covers, original compositions and a cappella song and verse. It was without the guitar backing that her voice was exposed in all its glassy glory, absolutely pure, penetrating every eave of the theatre.

Cover versions can often be redundant, self-indulgent, but here her slow re-telling of Pulp's Common People gave Jarvis Cocker's lyrics a new lease of life. It's a song about class tourism, pretending to be something you're not. There is no pretence in what Ward does. She clearly adores her craft, and it's easy to see why she bagged a brace of BBC awards.

The night was another triumph for The Set, the monthly do which is fast becoming the calling card of up-and-coming folk talent. Last time it was Luke Jackson, this time Lucy Ward. If this standard is maintained The Set's legs may stretch even further. 8/10

More at www.greenwichtheatre.org.uk

Highlights include a pyrotechnics-driven opener, as well as a UK premiere from the company that first produced War Horse, and a celebration of Greenwich's carnivalesque past.

"The Greenwich Fair is a re-invention of what used to happen in the early part of the 19th century," the director said. "There was this uproarious travelling event with menageries and fairground booths, dancing, dramas in tents – hundreds of thousands of people from across London came into Greenwich."

The festival has a history of working with disabled artists, and to mark the Paralympic year, the team have created the first ever, large-scale, outdoor spectacle led by disabled artists. The piece, Prometheus Awaits, takes place on June 22 in the grounds of the National Maritime Museum, with huge puppets, video projections and pyrotechnics.

"It really is a one-of-a-kind undertaking," he said. "We're working with Graeae Theatre Company from the UK, and a Catalan company called La Fura dels Baus who are world-renowned for creating big events, and were responsible for opening the Barcelona Games in 1992." Also on the 80-event bill is the UK premiere of Crow, produced by the company which made the original War Horse, before it went on to become a Steven Spielberg blockbuster.

"Crow is based on the Ted Hughes poetry cycle of the same name,"

Bradley said. "It's on at the Borough Halls from June 21-July 7, and is produced by the Handspring puppet company, which first produced War Horse on stage with the National Theatre."

GDIF runs from June 21-30 at various venues. More info and tickets at www.festival.org

GreenwichHomes

Royal Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 28 I

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the the Royal Borough of Greenwich's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed. Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to: For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time. For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

BAND

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, register an application on line at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Royal Borough of Greenwich about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Royal Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website: www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/homes
Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Royal Borough of Greenwich's website

The next edition of GreenwichHomes will be available on Wednesday 11 April 2012 at midday and will include any Housing Association properties when available. Closing date for all applications for this issue is midnight on Sunday 8 April 2012.

GreenwichHomes

Royal Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Important Notice

Changes to the rents and tenancies of some advertised housing association properties.

Affordable Housing

Currently the rent level for the properties you see advertised in Greenwich Homes is significantly lower than full market rents in private sector housing.

From now you will now be seeing some housing association properties advertised for higher rents, up to eighty percent of the market rent. These rents will also include the service charge that you will need to pay for the property. We will use the phrase Affordable Housing on the adverts to help you identify these properties.

Please note the Council will continue to advertise all the homes it owns at the standard rent level.

You can bid for properties advertised as Affordable Housing in exactly the same way as for other advertised properties. If you are successful the housing association may want to check you have enough income to pay the higher rent, whether you are working or on benefits. If you are currently a housing association tenant the rent you pay on your present home will not be affected by this change.

Fixed term tenancies

You will also notice that the tenancies for Affordable Housing and some other housing association properties may now be for a shorter period than the present lifetime tenancies offered by housing associations. The phrase Fixed term tenancy will be used in the adverts to identify these properties. The tenancy details will be explained to you if you are successful when you view the property.

Please think about these changes when bidding for an Affordable housing property and make sure you can afford the home that you choose.

This is what happened to the homes advertised in issue 278

Residents urged to become bee friendly

ROYAL Greenwich residents are being encouraged to be bee-friendly as part of the Capital Bee Campaign. The campaign aims to create a buzz about the benefits of community-run beekeeping and being nice to nature. Bees play a vital role in pollination, and in turn in food production. It is estimated that the value of pollination to UK agriculture is £440 million per year. But there has been a 54 per cent drop in the number of honey bee colonies in England, over the last 20 years. The Capital Bee campaign aims to stop this trend and boost bee numbers. Residents are encouraged to help by growing their own food to attract foraging bees; planting bee-friendly plants, such as honeysuckle and lavender; using organic, non-toxic pesticides and buying organic produce.

Making use of every available space you have for planting, even if it's just a window box, would help bee numbers bloom and be much appreciated. ● FOR more information on the Capital Bees Campaign visit www.capitalgrowth.org/ bees

Bat's the way to do it...new community cricket ground for Woolwich

Another boundary!

THEY'RE stretching the boundaries at Woolwich Common to herald in a whole new era of community cricket.

Work has begun on a brilliant new ground at the front of the Woolwich Academy housing development just off Red Lion Lane and, given the right amount of rain, it will be ready for "Play!" in April, 2013...

The need for a new ground became obvious as the game has taken off in Greenwich over the last 10 years. Blackheath Cricket Club, with its first team in the Kent Premier League, is just one example, going from six teams in 2000 to 14 juniors and 14 seniors this season.

Blackheath CC chairman Jon Taylor told GT: "All cricket clubs in the borough have experienced amazing growth. The net effect is that everybody's facilities are bursting at the seams, so about five years ago we started looking at how we could build another high quality ground."

"It will be very much cricket for all with women, girls and community teams welcome to use the ground, basically everyone who wants to play cricket."

by Peter Cordwell

Blackheath will provide one third to a half of the funding for the project, plus £50,000 from Sport England and £25,000 from the Mayor of London's Fund.

The ground will be in front of Durkan Estates' prestigious Royal Military Academy housing development with its mix of listed homes, new buildings and boulevards.

The metropolitan open land has been a cricket field for over 100 years apart from a period when it had a football pitch for the Garrison Babes run in the late Sixties by Woolwich character Keith Shillingford.

"I think it's going to look stunning," said Jon. "Can't you picture couples and families from the development picnicking as play goes on?"

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for culture and the Olympics, told GT: "This is clearly a marvellous and imaginative project that will benefit everyone in the borough who loves cricket. I can't wait for the first ball to be bowled in April next year."
